

“Yeeehaaaaa!”

Tim was born as 2nd son of a nuclear engineer and a teacher in North Rhine Westphalia, where he spent the first part of his life practicing every boardconnected sport you can imagine, except for the time when he lived in the vibrant Ohio metropolis Elyria, to get acquainted with the american way of life. After finishing school, he went on to work as a paramedic, before he could take off, to Berlin.

The engineer in his blood, he began to study biotechnology and at the same time started to sneak into the HdK which is the art school next door, because he had always heard the call of images wanting to be created in the back of his head.

In addition to his studies, he started working his way up through filmproduction, working in lots of different positions and departments behind the camera, before he went to the famous Filmakademie Ludwigsburg, to properly learn directing. Due to his love for images he learned the skills and worked a lot as cinematographer as well.

In the end he graduated as director in 2008, and ever since, works internationally as director mostly for commercials and shot tons of clips for clients like Porsche, VW, Deutsch Bank etc. but sometimes documentaries as well.

Since 2007, Tim picked up several awards. Amongst those are: Cannes Young director's award, ADC, First Steps, Porsche Award and Spotlight.

Whenever there is time and opportunity he still loves to shoot films as dop. He is currently getting some movement into the features section by developing several scripts and is awardee of the Milbrook scholartreat/script program.

So be prepared.